Hello from King's!

Whatever you are doing since you finished your degree at King's, we hope you are well on your way to work or further study that you find enjoyable, fulfilling and provides a successful platform for your future. But if things haven't quite worked out the way you planned just yet, you can continue to take advantage of the services provided by King's Careers & Employability for up to two years after your course ends, to help you decide and achieve your career goals.

To access our help, set up a graduate profile in King's CareerConnect and have a look at which of our services, events and activities can most help, whether that's an appointment to talk about your options, an event to find out more from employers who you'd like to work for, feedback on a CV or application, or a practice interview to help you nail that job you want.

So if we can help you with your career plans, please drop us a line, find us on social media, or give us a ring, and register yourself on King's CareerConnect.

By the way, whatever you're doing now or in the future, we're really interested in your story of life after King's, and in about 9 months time, the Higher Education Statistics Agency (HESA) are going to be back in touch about the Graduate Outcomes Survey, where they will ask for some details from you about what you are doing. When this information is passed to us, it helps us make sure that students get the most out of their time at King's to add value to their lives after King's. So whatever you are doing, your experience is helping more students find out the huge range of different things they can go on to do after studying the same course as you.

To make it easier for us to keep in touch, it would really help if you can keep your contact details up to date. If you are registered with the Alumni Office, then you can always update your contact details through their portal or through King's CareerConnect. If you do not want to register with either of those two communities, you can also email us your contact details directly through this link.

Either way, please keep in touch. We look forward to hearing your story and helping you write it!
